Sandy. President's tour

▶ President Barack Obama comforted Hurricane Sandy victim Dana Vanzant as he visited a neighborhood in Brigantine, N.J., yesterday. Residents in New Jersey and New York City sifted through the wreckage of superstorm Sandy as millions remained without power. The storm carved a trail of devastation across New York City and New Jersey, killing dozens of people in several states, swamping miles of coastline and throwing the tied-up White House race into disarray just days before the vote. {Pages 02, 04}

Massachusetts helps Sandy relief effort

Resources including helicopters and a search and rescue team from Massachusetts were deployed to various states that were left crippled earlier this week by Hurricane Sandy.

Two Blackhawk helicopters were sent to New Jersey and an urban search and rescue team was sent to Connecticut and New York, state officials said yesterday. Also, a crew of seven Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency officials will lend a hand in Albany to help officials there address response and recovery efforts.

The help was sent as part of a request made through the Emergency Management Assistance Compact. The deployment will last two weeks.

"Compared to other states like New York, Massachusetts was spared from the harshest impacts and devastation of Hurricane Sandy," said Gov. Deval Patrick. "We have been fortunate and we want to assist other states in any way we can. These committed MEMA officials will strengthen New York's recovery efforts."

While Massachusetts only received a glancing blow from Sandy, hundreds of thousands were left without power and countless trees were toppled across the state.

As of 4 p.m. yesterday, about 68,000 homes and businesses were still without power, according to NSTAR and National Grid. In Boston, that number was 462. Cambridge had about 602 places without power and a few dozen places were still dark in Somerville. METRO/MN

$116M

The state finished fiscal year 2012 with a $116 million surplus that will be deposited into the "rainy day" fund, according to state officials. The Office of Administration and Finance announced yesterday that revenues exceeded state spending last year and said the surplus money will be useful in mitigating impacts to services and programs should tax collections continue to lag behind spending projections for fiscal 2013. SHNS

Redistricting

With less than a week to spare, the Boston City Council passed a redistricting plan that Mayor Thomas Menino said he would sign. Councilors passed the map during a meeting yeterday. It was their third attempt after Menino vetoed the first two because of concerns of concentrating people of color into too few districts. Menino will sign this map, according to the Globe. METRO

BROCKTON. The plodding pig, which was held by Brockton Animal Control officers after the city banned it, is back with his owner.

"Porkchop," the 3-year-old pot-bellied pig owned by Anthony Ruiz, was returned to his owner after a court hearing yesterday, Ruiz said.

Brockton officials have said people complained about "Porkchop" roaming the neighborhood, an allegation Ruiz denies.

A judge said last week Ruiz must find a new home for the pig. Yesterday the judge ruled the city could no longer keep "Porkchop" locked up. METRO

Mattapan massacre trial begins Round 2

- Suspected gunman Moore allegedly killed four people, including infant
- Families hear murder details again
- Defense attacks witness credibility

The long and anguishing process of hearing how four young people, including a 2-year-old boy, were executed on a Mattapan street began again yesterday for the family members and friends of the Mattapan massacre victims.

The last time the family members were in the downtown Boston court building for the trial, some of them had to be carried out, overcome with emotion after a jury acquitted one man and could not come to a verdict on murder charges facing Dwayne Moore.

Moore, 35, is accused of gunning down the four people and shooting another man in the head during a home invasion and robbery in 2010. Yesterday lawyers gave their opening statements for Moore's retrial.

Assistant District Attorney Edmond Zabin again laid out his case, telling jurors about the carnage the responding police officers encountered on the street and the witnesses he plans to call.

One of those witnesses is key to the prosecution's case, but his testimony has been controversial. Kimani Washington was arrested in connection with the murders, but is serving time in jail as part of a plea deal. He will testify that he left before the murders and that Moore had also participated in the robbery, but didn't leave with him.

But Washington's credibility came under attack by John Amabile, Moore's attorney.

Amabile called Washington a "drunk" and a "gangster" who makes a living committing robberies and can't be trusted. MICHAEL NAUGHTON

▶ Elvis Martin, the father of victim Simba Martin, held his head as he listened to opening statements in court yesterday.

Emotions in check

Because of the impact of the tragic murders and graphic details discussed during the trial, emotions are hard to keep under control.

The first trial earlier this year was interrupted by many outbursts and the courtroom overflowed with family members and friends of the multiple victims.

However, during the start of yesterday's retrial, only a handful of the family members and friends showed up. Some of them put their heads down, wiped tears and left the courtroom while the murders were recounted in the opening statements.

"It has become clear that some portions of these proceedings can be difficult to observe and restrain one's emotions," said Judge Jeffrey Locke. METRO/MN

Start delayed

The start of yesterday's opening statements was delayed about 90 minutes because jurors were unable to get to the Suffolk Superior Court near Government Center.

The jurors were selected from Worcester County because of the intense media coverage. They are being bused in, but a scheduler wrote the wrong day. METRO/MN

The victims

The deceased victims of the Mattapan shooting ranged in age from 2 to 22.

- Amanihotep Smith, 2
- Eyanna Flonory, 21
- Simba Martin, 21
- Levaughn Washum-Garrison, 22
- Marcus Hurd was shot in the head, but survived. He is now a quadriplegic, but is expected to testify during the retrial.

With fare hike, MBTA ridership continues growth

MBTA raised fares in July by average of over 20 percent ◗ More than five percent drop was forecasted

Once again, numbers released by the MBTA show that ridership continues to grow despite fare hikes in July that raised the cost of travel by an average of 23 percent.

Weekday ridership for September increased by 1.5 percent over last September, averaging 1.369 million passenger trips per weekday.

T officials noted the fact that more people were riding the system despite paying more to do so.

"The second consecutive monthly increase comes just three months after a new fare structure was implemented," said Joe Pesaturo, a T spokesman.

While T officials were pondering the fare increase earlier this year, analysts had projected a 5.5 percent decrease in passenger trips.

Data showed that bus weekday ridership increased by 2.3 percent and subway ridership grew by 3 percent.

Acting T General Manager Jonathan Davis said the September numbers are encouraging because, unlike July and August, the month is more typical of regular MBTA ridership patterns due to school being in session and employees returning from summer vacations.

He also said staff will continue to evaluate ridership levels before making a final judgment on the effects of the fare increase, but that the data suggests many people still consider the MBTA "an affordable and convenient alternative to motor vehicles." MORGAN ROUSSEAU

By the numbers

Officials had projected that the July fare increases would cause drops of 5.5 percent and 5.3 percent for bus and subway, respectively.

- Green Line average weekday ridership decreased by 1.2 percent, which is better than the forecasted drop of 5.3 percent.
- Commuter Rail average weekday ridership decreased slightly, by 0.2 percent, which was better than expected.

News in brief

Twitter stoked weird rumours during storm

As Hurricane Sandy pounded the U.S. Atlantic coast Monday night, knocking out electricity and Internet connections, millions of residents turned to Twitter as a part-newswire, part-911 hotline that hummed through the night even as some websites failed and parts of Manhattan fell dark.

But the social network also became a fertile ground for pranksters who disseminated rumors and Photoshopped images, including a false tweet Monday night that the trading floor at the New York Stock Exchange was submerged under several feet of water.

The exchange issued a denial, but not before the tweet was circulated by countless users and reported on-air by CNN. REUTERS

NY subway back to limited service

New York City's subway system will resume limited operations Thursday, four days after it was shut down ahead of the arrival of Sandy, the massive storm that brought unprecedented flooding to the world's financial capital, New York Governor Andrew Cuomo said.

Limited service on suburban commuter rail lines serving Long Island to the east and Westchester County and Connecticut to the north was to resume on Wednesday afternoon, Cuomo said at a press conference. Trains were to begin operating on the Long Island Railroad and Metro North Railroad systems at 2 p.m. Wednesday. REUTERS

Over 6 million still without power in NE

About 6.2 million homes and businesses in 16 U.S. states remained without power yesterday as utilities scrambled to restore service disrupted by Hurricane Sandy, federal data showed.

The power companies had restored electricity to some 2.28 million customers in the U.S. Northeast, although the pace of recovery in New York appeared to lag behind other storm-hit states, the data showed.

At the storm's peak, 8.48 million customers were without power after Sandy came ashore with hurricane-force winds in New Jersey on Monday, according to Department of Energy data.

Power has been restored to nearly 600,000 customers in New Jersey, out of more than 2.6 million that lost power, although more than half the state still remains dark, according to the data as of 10 a.m.

In New York, where Sandy knocked out power to nearly a third of the customers in New York City and Westchester County, only about 165,000 customers of the total 2.1 million that lost power in the state have seen it restored, according to the figures.

The DOE did not provide any further comment or explanation for the figures.

In New York, power company Consolidated Edison Inc said Sandy was the largest storm-related outage in its history. The previous record was the more than 200,000 customers affected by Hurricane Irene in 2011. REUTERS

Obama, Romney halt campaigns — for now

President Barack Obama and Republican Mitt Romney yesterday briefly put aside their fierce battle for the White House, as they avoided politics to focus on relief efforts after mammoth storm Sandy left millions of Americans struggling to recover.

With a week left in a deadlocked election race, Obama canceled campaign trips planned for Tuesday and Wednesday to stay in Washington and supervise storm recovery, while Romney held a storm relief event in the swing state of Ohio but ducked most political talk.

The campaign truce was likely to be short-lived.

Romney planned to hit the trail again for rallies in Florida on Wednesday. Obama was expected to return to campaigning today for the final sprint to Election Day. REUTERS

Gene Hackman rumbles with homeless man

Gene Hackman reportedly slapped a homeless man — but before you become aghast at the actor's lack of sympathy against those less fortunate, this wasn't a case of a 1-percenter going rogue on a member of Occupy Wall Street. No, apparently the homeless man accosted Hackman's wife, Betsy Arakawa, and Hackman's slap was justified.

The story goes like this: Hackman and Arakawa were leaving a restaurant in New Mexico when the homeless man, Bruce Becker, reportedly approached the couple. An argument ensued, culminating with Becker insulting Arakawa and Hackman defending himself by striking Becker. The police were called, but no charges were made against Hackman, as it was determined he acted in self-defense. His rep did not respond to a request for comment. Now the homeless man can claim he was slapped by Gene Hackman, which is more than the rest of us can say. However, we have homes — so let's call it even.

▶ If Snooki becomes a single mom, does she get another MTV spin-off?

Snooki to soon be single?

Poor baby Lorenzo LaValle. Not only does he have an Oompa Loompa for a mother, but if Star magazine is to be believed, that Oompa Loompa will soon be raising him on her own.

The magazine is reporting that Nicole "Snooki" Polizzi, who is currently promoting her MTV spin-off "Snooki and JWoww" and her fiance Jionni LaValle are breaking up and are only together for fame. (Snooki is only doing something for attention? You don't say!)

"Snooki is desperate to stay famous," a source told the magazine. "She can't stand to be around Jionni. She's only going to go through with the wedding for a million-dollar payday." And Snooki is angry at Jionni because "he refuses to even touch the baby and acts like he can't hear Lorenzo screaming for attention," the source says. Star says the animosity between the two are so bad they can't be in the same room for one another.

But, of course, they can be in the same room when the cameras on!

This means that Snooki will soon have her own spin-off-off (that's a spin-off of a spin-off) about being a single mom. This is great for MTV, as its lineup of reality TV shows about young, foolish women with bad tans raising babies solo was looking kinda slim lately.

Talking points

It's three weddings for Cyrus and Hemsworth

Miley Cyrus is reportedly planning to go all out when she marries fiance Liam Hemsworth, celebrating with three lavish weddings around the globe, according to Star magazine. Cyrus and Hemsworth, who announced their engagement in June, are said to be planning separate ceremonies in Los Angeles, her native Tennessee and his hometown of Melbourne, Australia. All three ceremonies will reportedly take place next year — with a different wedding dress for each — and Cyrus has reportedly budgeted $1 million for the endeavor.

Brand wants to talk to Lohan, alone

Russell Brand, who is something of an expert when it comes to facing problems with drugs and alcohol, could offer troubled starlet Lindsay Lohan some pretty valuable advice — but he's saving it for the Lohan herself. "If I did have [advice], I'd give it to her directly," Brand tells Hollyscoop. "Lindsay, I don't suppose you got a phone or anything?" And while he waits for her contact info, the former addict does have some advice for stars who don't necessarily need treatment: "If they don't have a problem with drugs or alcohol, they should drink a lot and take lots of drugs and enjoy themselves," he says.

Bieber and his pet hamster: Friends for life

Justin Bieber likes to keep things interesting while on the road, and keeping things interesting apparently involves carting around a pet hamster named Pac. "This is Pac the hamster, my new Believe Tour pet," Bieber says in a post to Twitter that includes a photo of the tiny rodent. "I will bring him to every meet-and-greet." Bieber has since posted numerous photos of the hamster out on the road.

Are past betrayals ruining your current relationship?

Shrink wrap

DR. JANE GREER
HEALTH.METRO.US

Did Eva Longoria's recent break up with Mark Sanchez have anything to do with the memories of Tony Parker's infidelity? There didn't seem to be any indication that they were having trouble, but sometimes there is nothing to see because it is what's going on below the surface that can cause the problem. For many, it's hard to start over, especially if you've been betrayed in a previous relationship. You don't have to be a celebrity to ask the question: Is your past interfering with your present?

Take my patient Hillary, for example. Her boyfriend had been cheated on by his previous girlfriend. He always wants to know where Hillary is and who she is talking to. She has no intention of hurting him or being with another guy, but his demands and constant questioning make her feel boxed in. The other day, when an old friend called, she didn't tell her boyfriend — not because she had anything to hide, but because she was afraid of how he would react. He found out later and blew up, angry that she had kept it from him. There was no actual problem, but he was creating one. His jealousy and accusations were perpetuating the very thing he was looking to avoid.

Take your partner at face value. If Hillary had been able to explain that it was just an old college friend who had called, and her boyfriend had been able to listen and believe it, things would have gone smoother. Look at the consistency between what your partner says and what he or she does. My patient wasn't making any moves to be with someone else. If her boyfriend hadn't been carrying over the fear from his last heartbreak, he would have been able to see that things were good between them. Most importantly, focus on the present, not the past or the future.

Alexander Ridha has made a name for himself. Performing under the name Boys Noize, he's been able to mix it up with big names like Tiesto and Skrillex and collaborate with Snoop Dogg and Jarvis Cocker — all without major label representation. We caught up with Ridha at Electric Zoo in New York City to talk about his newest album, "Out of the Black," and find out what influences him and keeps him going.

"Out of the Black" just came out last month. What inspired you most on this album?
One of the big parts of this album was really getting back — since it's my third album — I was trying to get this feeling back when I first started producing. Most of the time, when you don't know what you are doing, that's when the magic happens. I was really clearing my head and forgetting about everything that is going on right now and what is hot right now. It's a very personal album. I would say it's a mix of my first and second albums.

You have a lot of disco and hip-hop influences. Is that what you grew up listening to?
I have a 10-years older brother, and at the end of the '80s he was buying all those early house records, so I was always into that, into real house music and rap at the same time, Run DMC and Public Enemy and stuff. ... The old school stuff was kind of like Pharcyde or Wu-Tang. When that s— came out, I was able to rap the whole ODB album, the first one. Even though I didn't understand anything because I was German, I was rapping along! I stopped buying hip-hop records toward the beginning of 2000 because it got too much, like, jiggy, and it was only about like rims and stuff. But I was still a big fan of any Neptunes or Timbaland production, and of course Dre. And of course Snoop!

Speaking of Snoop Dogg — or Snoop Lion, I guess ...
Not on my album! On my album he's Snoop Dogg! [laughs]

What was it like working with him on "Got It"?
I was always saying to myself, "If I would be able to make a track for him, I could stop making music." I grew up with his sound. It was cool. You know he wants to vibe first, so we hung out a little bit. In the beginning of this year, we had the chance to record music together, hang out in his apartment and stuff. It was really nice and he's such a great guy.

How do you pick who you collaborate with?
Normally on my music, I don't collaborate with a lot of people. I never have "featuring" on my album, except that Snoop joint. But, when I make music with other people, it has to be someone who inspires me as well, where I can learn something. ... [It has to be] something where when you make music with a person, something comes out that you wouldn't do on your own, like really creating something different. Working with people that inspire me as well is really important.

Dog Blood brothers?

The Skrillex connection

One of your collaborations is Dog Blood, with Skrillex. How did that come about?
Yeah, I've heard about that. [laughs, pretending he is not involved] It's two crazy guys. They are from two different backgrounds. I heard they made some music in Berlin. It's pretty cool. I like their stuff.

Seriously, did you guys just meet up one day?
We're good friends. He's a cool guy. We just played around with some stuff.

Q&A

Why is it important to keep up your DIY ethic?

It's been the most important thing in everything I do to be very careful where to put my name. ... I think for me, it's like my baby, and I see music as an art. I want to look back and think everything I've done is 100 percent cool. It's not the easiest road you can take. It's so easy to do things for money and partner up with whatever labels and mangers and whatever. For me it was important to stay true to whatever I do. In the end it's about music, and I never saw music as a business. I wouldn't produce a track to make money off it. I make music because I love it, and it's in my heart. If it happens that I get popular with that and mainstream, then it's the way you crossover, then it's cool with me.

Chris Walla's wingman work notwithstanding, Death Cab for Cutie has always pretty much been the Ben Gibbard show. And solo Gibbard, unsurprisingly, isn't different, even as ol' Benjy experiments with different styles. If anything, it's less moody, maybe because he's no longer working under a moniker that includes the word "death." Perhaps emo kids can stop crying after all!

Coltrane is seen here wearing a kind of blue.

John Coltrane is such an institution in jazz that this annual tribute concert, now in its 35th year, has become a local institution itself. Gathering together some of Boston's best jazz musicians, it's always a treat. This year's featured performer is drummer Terri Lyne Carrington; producer Steve Schwartz and saxophonist Andy McGhee will receive special honors. Also, we were really psyched to run a color photo of John Coltrane. You don't get to see many of those. Here he is, performing in Newport in 1966!

Sweet home 'Chicago'

You know him from 'Seinfeld,' 'Family Feud' and 'Dancing with the Stars,' but O'Hurley has been with this musical for longer than any of those shows

You may know him as J. Peterman, poetic catalogue man in "Seinfeld," or as a "Dancing with the Stars" contestant, or maybe you just know him by his deep, recognizable voice.

But for seven years, John O'Hurley has also starred as lawyer Billy Flynn in the musical "Chicago."

"The character has matured enormously for me in that time," says the multifaceted performer, who joined the show on Broadway in 2005. "Something new occurs to me about the role and the script every night."

He sees Billy as more than a sleazy defense attorney trying to turn blonde babe and murderess Roxie Hart into a media sweetheart.

"If you play him at that level, the show is over in five minutes," says O'Hurley. "He has to go on a journey, too."

When another female inmate is hanged, Billy's game changes.

"The stakes have never been so high. It's now about staying alive and not about becoming famous," explains O'Hurley.

He says the show's theme rings true in contemporary society.

"We try to make people that are otherwise indictable into celebrities," O'Hurley says. "We make people famous that want to be famous, rather than people who have the talent to be famous."

Speaking of famous: Supermodel Christie Brinkley plays Roxie Hart.

"I'm the guy who couldn't get a date to senior prom and now I have Christie Brinkley sitting on my lap at one point of the show," says O'Hurley of his co-star.

O'Hurley takes the cake

O'Hurley, who grew up in Maine, is a loyal Red Sox fan, and he's not just saying that to pander to readers: "We actually had a Boston Red Sox wedding cake, and we spent part of our honeymoon at Fenway Park," he says.

O'Hurley through the years

Just in case you doubt the veracity of our claim in the sub-headline, here's the breakdown of O'Hurley's other best-known endeavors.

- "To Tell the Truth": 2000 to 2002
- "Dancing with the Stars": 2004

BAILOUTS BOUGHT US TIME

Metropolitik

MICHAEL J. FROSCH
METRO POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT

Four years ago, Mitt Romney warned that "you can kiss the American automotive industry goodbye" if the U.S. government agreed to bail it out prior to being restructured in bankruptcy.

But Romney got it completely wrong. Although Chrysler and General Motors received two rounds of bailouts before both companies ultimately filed for bankruptcy in mid-2009, the American automotive industry emerged with surging sales and renewed profitability.

Romney's fearmongering in opposition to the auto bailouts has cost him with auto workers in Ohio – likely to be the most crucial of all swing states. Auto workers' skepticism of Mitt Romney is certainly justified, but not for the reasons most might think.

You see, President Obama actually got it wrong in the third debate: Mitt Romney did not propose letting the auto industry fail. It is certainly possible that even with government guarantees on lines of credit down the entire supply chain there simply wouldn't have been enough private capital available to keep things going. But this misses the point. Romney's sin on the auto bailout was far worse than merely favoring private financing over public.

Romney argued that the auto industry was doomed to failure because auto workers' salaries and benefits grew so large that it became impossible to compete. Romney warned that auto workers must accept "sanity in salaries and perks." Mitt Romney blamed the failure of the American auto industry on the auto workers, so he proposed to save it by crushing them.

Without those government bailouts, Chrysler and GM would have been forced to enter bankruptcy immediately and suspend production indefinitely. With hundreds of thousands of auto workers in limbo, the unions would have faced pressure to give massive concessions in bankruptcy negotiations. By allowing the auto workers to continue working, the bailouts bought enough time for the unions to negotiate a fair deal for their workers.

This is the real reason why Mitt Romney opposed bailing out the auto industry before bankruptcy – doing so would spoil a golden opportunity to stick it to the auto workers. It's fitting then that Ohio auto workers are making the most of their opportunity to stick it to Mitt Romney.

Horoscope

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. All the ideas you conceive will be constructive and functional, yet you may have to water them down a bit, in order for them to be employable by less-gifted minds.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. Chances are you'll be far luckier when involved in independent projects rather than group-oriented ones. Go it alone if you can.

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. An extremely enterprising associate with whom you've been closely involved in the past will be instrumental in helping you create something that could be very important.

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. If you're looking to make some kind of important deal, this could be the day to do it. You're apt to be far more fortunate in striking a bargain or acquiring an important job.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Someone with whom you'll be involved could come up with an ingenious idea concerning your work or career. It'll have a few flaws, but they can be corrected.

♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Be careful that you don't unintentionally impose yourself business-wise on someone you know purely on a social basis. Besides, chances are you'd do better without them, anyway.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. You're likely to find that a development that you thought was overwhelming is actually far less intimidating. All your fears will vanish.

In the news

Tebow trade?

The Jaguars want to create a buzz with their stagnant franchise by landing the NFL's most popular backup fish, according to CBS 47 in Jacksonville.

The news station reported that the franchise wants to trade for Jets quarterback Tim Tebow before today's 4 p.m. deadline. The Jets haven't been able to successfully incorporate Tebow into the offense this season.

Doom and gloom for Celts?

C's can't dwell on poor opening night showing Jeff Green has to be better Barbosa stepping up

Well, after the Celtics first game of the season, one thing is for sure: It's going to be a disaster.

They're on pace to become the first 0-82 team in league history.

Oh, and Jeff Green? Probably the worst signing since Mark Blount. The Celtics needed a win against the Heat Tuesday in order to win the NBA Championship, and instead gave up 120 points in the loss. You can thank Danny Ainge and Doc Rivers for this mess.

Alright, alright ... we're done.

The point is that it's just one of 82 games this year, and the first one at that. This is essentially a new basketball team when you consider how many rotational players didn't call Boston home last season. It's going to take time.

The Heat on the other hand are coming off a championship and have essentially the same team – plus that other guy there who can shoot 3-pointers ... what's his name again?

The Celtics lost their first game for a few reasons: Some players looked hesitant on offense, everybody looked a little confused on defense, and the Heat are still the best in the NBA – like it or not.

The good news is that Boston dropped 107 points against a Heat team that was at the top of the league in defense last season. The Celtics struggled last season with scoring, going into droughts that would make you pull out your hair.

We saw firsthand just how deep they are this time around when the last person to join their team, Leandro Barbosa, came off the bench in the fourth quarter to score 16 points and spark a Celtics comeback that ultimately fell short. But the team isn't going to look back at the loss any longer. The Celtics have their home opener Friday night against the Milwaukee Bucks followed by another game the next night in Washington, D.C.

The hope is that a comeback isn't needed against these teams that will be fighting just to make the playoffs this season.

The Beanpot Report: All teams in Top 25

New England should be dancing in December thanks to second half
'Second bye week' will help

There are no NHL games in November with the Winter Classic set to be cancelled any second now, so it's time to devote your hockey-related attention to the NCAA. All four of the Beanpot teams were in action last weekend and collectively, they went an impressive 5-1-1. What's more, each squad is currently ranked in the Top 15 in the latest USCHO.com Top 20 poll: Boston College is No. 1, Boston University is No. 12, Harvard is No. 13 and Northeastern is No. 15. With social media's rapid popularity and more weekly television coverage than ever, there is no excuse not to get into this wonderful sport.

Power rankings

1) Boston College (4-1-0; No. 1 in USCHO.com poll)
Last week: Won 1-0 at UMass-Lowell on Friday; Beat the River Hawks 6-3 on Sunday
This week: at Maine on Friday; host UMass-Amherst on Sunday
It seems like months ago that the Eagles lost their season opener. Since then, they've won four in a row and they seem to get better in each outing. The national media has noticed too since the defending NCAA champions are back in the top spot. Last week's victories show that they can win low-scoring, tight contests or shootouts. Beware Hockey East and the rest of the country.

2) Boston University (3-1-0; No. 12 in USCHO.com poll)
Last week: Beat UMass-Amherst 5-2 on Friday; Won at UMass-Amherst 3-2 on Saturday
This week: at North Dakota Friday and Saturday
It was an impressive weekend for the Terriers who successfully got the home-and-home sweep of the Minutemen. Scoring eight goals against any Hockey East opponent is also something to remember. They will need all that firepower and confidence as they make a long road trip to face the No. 6 Fighting Sioux (2-1-1) who are always one of the top teams in college hockey. Any positive result, even a tie would show that BU is really going places this winter.

3) Harvard (1-0-0; No. 13 in USCHO.com poll)
Last week: Beat Bentley 5-0 on Saturday
This week: vs. Brown on Friday; vs. Yale on Saturday
The Crimson kicked off their 2012-13 campaign with a whitewashing of the Falcons in Cambridge. They have a chance to make some moves early in the season with five straight games at the Bright Center. Two games against ECAC foes this weekend should be a good barometer and tell us more about what to expect from them.

4) Northeastern (2-2-1; No. 15 in USCHO.com poll)
Last week: Lost 4-3 at UNH on Friday; Tied UNH 0-0 on Saturday
This week: vs. Merrimack on Friday; at Merrimack on Saturday
There is no reason to panic yet but we can admit that the Huskies have struggled in recent weeks (winless in three straight). On the positive side, they were right there in both games against the Wildcats.
